

Sounds right To Me

A woman drove her car on a road running due north at a given rate for 6 hours. She continued her trip on an unpaved road due east for five hours at a rate 4 miles per hour slower. Had she been able to go to her destination in a straight line from her starting point and at her original rate, she would have taken 7.5 hours. Find her rate for the first part of her journey